

WHY I LOVE MY SCHOOL

I study at The British School and I have been studying here for more than two years. I honestly love my school. I spend over 30 hours in a week in school. While school is not always fun or easy, I try to make it a good experience at all times. I believe that education is very important.

I love my school because not only is it my school, it is also my second home, and home means family. In school our classmates, teachers, and staff become our family members. The family we have in school is more than just a class for our teachers to nag us about our grades and homework. Family is where we support and take care of each other, we get to know one another, it is where we improve each other emotionally.

When I walk in to my school, I feel that today is another day to learn, to challenge myself, to achieve. I walk into class at 8:25a.m. It's so comforting to know I can expect friendly faces from both students and teachers as I enter. In fact, every single one of my teachers stands at the door to welcome us. It might be a simple gesture, but it doesn't go unnoticed. Atleast not by me. In the classroom, I feel like others care and respect me.

For many teachers, teaching is just a way to earn money, just a job. But the teachers in The British School the teachers are nothing like that. They care for their students and understand them.

Also my peers are surely one of the nicest. If you trip down the stairs someone magically appears next to you to help pick you back up. They even talk nicely to each other. Our peers also motivate us to honestly help us be a better person. This is why The British School is above and beyond the normal school expectations. This is why I love my School.
